

Panel Breakout 3A: The Future of Work

Speaker: Katherine Chapman

Assistant Director, UK Commission for Employment & Skills (UKCES)

Katherine Chapman is the Assistant Director at UKCES, a publicly funded, industry-led organisation that provides strategic leadership and advice on skills and employment issues in the UK. UKCES conducts a wide range of research into the UK labour market and future skills needs, including producing a series of UK labour market projections. Katherine is an experienced policy and research professional with a background in analysing, developing and communicating effective skills, and employment policy. In her role with UKCES, Katherine directs national and international research programme, and most recently led on developing UKCES's new strategy for Employment and Skills over the next decade working closely with business leaders, industry experts, trade unions and government. Katherine holds a B.A. in History from Nottingham University, and a Masters in Modern History from University of Oxford.